JAPANESE TROOPS WERE KEPT OUT

United States Protest Kept Large Force Out of European War.

[By Associated Press.]
The Hague, via London, June 23.—The Handelsblad Tuesday asserts that Japan was prevented from sending 300,000 troops to Europe as the result of an unofficial hint to Great Britain from Washington that such an expression would be undesirable.

The newspaper declares that a Japanese army of that strength was exercising preparatory to departure for the European battlefield, but that Great Britain, after receiving the information from the United States, informed Tokyo that she "was sorry, but that under American pressure, must request the Japanese government to do nothing further concerning the dispatch of an expeditionary corps to Europe."

"After this," the Handelsblad concludes, "the Japanese army disappeared from Manchuria, probably much to the relief of Great Britain, which has never desired Japanese participation in the fighting in Europe."

Berlin, June 23.—Lemberg has been conquered after a very severe battle, according to the official report from field headquarters.

The Russians captured Lemberg on the second of last September, and had taken practically the entire province of Galicia, when the great German-Austrian drive began a few weeks ago.

The Germans claim they have captured sixty thousand Russians since the middle of June.
